They were both separately admitted Hill claimed on the Father's side, and Hodgkin claimed on the mother's side. The Homage could not make out which was entitled, and in consequence of that decision, each took a separate admission of the same estate. The mother of Elizabeth Hill took a joint life estate with her husband, but she took the fee by the last limitation in every ~~particular~~ admission. I should have thought her side would have been solely admitted in exclusion of the father's side.
