Namque civis Romuli imperator, cuius imperium existisset, postea terram et aquis regnavit, et in his temporibus diem praebuit se in hoc negotio esse etiam universale. Item in eodem tempore, quod Caesar Augustus imperavit, in diversis partibus orbis terrae regnavit et innumeris gentibus prosperavit. Hic est exemplo regni et imperii, quae in omnibus valet et in omnibus est.

This page contains a mix of Latin and English script, with some text appearing to be written in a medieval or Middle English style. The writing is quite faded and difficult to read in places, but it seems to discuss topics related to land and property, possibly including legal or agricultural details. The document appears to be a historical or legal record, possibly a deed or a contract, given the context of the language and the formatting.
